Our Future

Resting in the hands and minds of children like Janine Vilain is the future of our world. Their eyes are turned west now, toward the United States, praying that their liberators will remember the children whom they freed, and with shipments of food save them from the ravages of disease and starvation that are stalking Europe.

Janine and millions like her are the reason why this year Americans are again asked to cultivate their wartime Victory Gardens and to conserve food. The war with arms is over, but we haven't won until we defeat the spectre of famine.

THE COVER . . . One of the most picturesque and renowned beauties of the Maine coast is the Portland Lighthouse, one of three lights still shining for our nation that were authorized by George Washington when he was leader of the Colonies.

Construction of the lighthouse began in 1787, was completed three years later, and it first beamed out over the Atlantic on January 10, 1791.

Sitting on a rock in the shadow of the lighthouse, listening to the crash of the surf around him, and looking out into the blue-green eternity, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was inspired to write his Wreck of the Hesperus.

There's a tablet here commemorating the wreck on December 24, 1886, of the four-rigged Annie McGuire. The Captain's wife was brought ashore in a breeches buoy carrying in her hatbox the ship's papers and money.

On the last day of May Captain Robert Thayer Sterling retired after 33 years of tending the light.

Each of these vocalists sang at least one specialty number: Pauline Thompson, Marie Pearl, Patricia Murphy, Gladys Goodwin, Mary Sheridan, Alice Chrisom, Mildred Gillan, Marie Thornton, Louise Dame, Mary Hanson and Phyllis Horne.

Dancers who were rhythmical proof that a pretty girl is like a melody: Jean Glynn, Marie Cushing, Mary Mullen, Ruth Sheffnian, Marie Kelly, Marie Walsh, Ruth Goggin, Jessie MacLeod, Gerry Mahoney, Jacqueline Bevins.

Every show has its directors. Daniel Bowen of Metropolitan Plant was Director; Dixie Summerson of the General Treasury Department supervised the dance routines; and Thomas Mahoney, District Traffic Superintendent, was sponsor of the show.

Dancers who performed specialty numbers were Theresa Arsenault, Marion Robar, Boston Toll; Ann Fiore, Liberty; and Kathleen Donly of the Revenue Accounting Department.

THE "All Sold Out" sign was in the box office at Jordan Hall when the Boston Toll girls presented their annual Minstrel and Musical Revue on the nights of May 6 and 7 to a house packed with their fellow employees and friends.

The serious purpose behind all the fun was to further an activity which has meant much to these girls since early in 1944 when they established a Wounded Servicemen's Fund. Since that time the Boston Toll girls have been providing recreation-hall and ward entertainment monthly at the Waltham Regional and Cushing General Hospitals and, until it closed recently, at the Myles Standish Hospital in Taunton.

Through the Fund they have provided reading matter and other small incidental comforts for the patients in these and other veterans' hospitals. But the single contribution of which they are most proud is a room in the paraplegic ward at the Cushing Hospital in Framingham which they sponsored by contributing eight hundred dollars and long hours of hard work. Because the boys in this ward have little hope of ever leaving the hospital the room was decorated and furnished to look as little as possible like a hospital room.

The Show was another plug for these handicapped veterans, and although the Toll girls sponsored it, through their Supervising Chief Operator, Ellen J. Logan, they publicly thanked the girls and men from all departments of the Company who volunteered to help them.

For a grand finale the entire cast filled the stage and all sang OKLAHOMA and IT'S A GRAND OLD FLAG.

"Meet Me in St. Louis, Louis" said these fair damsels to their dandies: Marie Cushing, Sumner Widell, Mary O'Brien, William O'Meara, Claire LeVangie, Bart Lenehors, Julia Giangrande, William Cummings, Jessie MacLeod, John Cummings, Ann Coyne, Al Slutzky.

Al Slutzky of the Building Department made a hit as soloist for the Gay Ninety Revue when he sang, with feeling, SHE'S ONLY A BIRD IN A GILDED CAGE.

When the curtain went up on the show, the entire cast gathered beneath a huge Bell System flag and greeted the audience with HI NEIGHBOR. On both nights they were called back for an encore.

The Revenuettes featured Marjorie Mitchell, Helen O'Halloran, Gertrude Cheevoor, Jacqueline Bevins, Regina Hurley, Margaret Hurley, Florence Celata, Mary Mullen and Mary Sigsworth.

Hula hula girls are favorites in all climates. The Toll Show revue was led by Ann Fiore, center. Accompanying her were Margaret Farren, Mary Finn, Marie Kelly, Katherine Gallagher, Marie Puopolo, Geraldine Mahoney and Mary Callahan.

How many can you name?

WE won't ask you to guess the names of the two girls. They are Myrtle Muska (left) and Eleanor Pytlewicz of the Western Electric Hawthorne plant in Chicago. But do you know the names of the various types of telephone instruments shown with the girls? They are some of the types now being manufactured at Hawthorne. You can check your answers with the list on the opposite page.

25% Discount on New Western Electric Hearing Aid

MORE than 500 Bell System employees or members of their immediate families have taken advantage of the 25% discount on Western Electric's Model 63 Hearing Aid since it was first offered in July, 1945.

The Hearing Aids are available at a discount to Bell System people on the following basis:

(1.) Any employee or pensioner of the System may purchase Hearing Aids of Western Electric manufacture at a discount for his own use or for the use of a member of his family who, if not living in the same household, is dependent on the employee.

(2.) Any member of the immediate family of a Bell System employee or pensioner may buy at the discount provided the person involved lives in the same household or is fully dependent on the employee or pensioner.

Those interested should get in touch with the nearest Western Electric Hearing Aid dealer, whose name is listed in the classified telephone directory under "Hearing Aids." An employee or pensioner should present his Bell System identification card. If a member of the family is making the purchase, he should present the card. In locations where there are no dealers, write to Department 380, Western Electric Company, 195 Broadway, New York 7, N. Y.

Playing Overseas Operator Role on "Telephone Hour" She Misses Own Call from Tokyo

THE real thing is much better than play acting when it comes to calls from GI's abroad, and Virginia Dwyer Fleming, radio actress, can tell you why. Mrs. Fleming recently took the part of an overseas operator in a skit on "The Telephone Hour" simulating a call from a GI in Germany to his mother in the States. When she got home that night, she found she had missed a call from her GI husband in Tokyo.

Efforts of the overseas operating force to follow up the call for her were hampered by the telephone situation in Tokyo. Calls are filed from a couple of booths there by appointment. If a call does not go through as scheduled and the caller leaves the booth, there is nothing to do but wait until he comes back. Tokyo's telephone system still being practically non-existent, people cannot be tracked down by telephone as they can in an American city.

Fortunately, Mrs. Fleming's husband was persistent and tried again at 8 a.m. the following Friday, which was 6 p.m. Thursday in New York. This time Mrs. Fleming was rehearsing another skit but she had left word where she might be reached and the call was transferred to her.

W. A. Hughes Elected President of Indiana Bell

WILLIAM A. HUGHES, executive vice president of the Indiana Bell Telephone Company, has been elected president of that Company, effective June 1.

Mr. Hughes will succeed James F. Carroll, retiring after nearly 40 years in the Bell System.

The new president-elect has spent most of his 27 years of Bell System service with the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. His first telephone job, following graduation from the College of Emporia, Emporia, Kansas, in 1917, was on outside construction work with the Missouri and Kansas Telephone Company. A short time later he entered the Army. In August, 1919, he went to work for Southwestern Bell.

Rising in the organization, Mr. Hughes became general traffic manager of the Company in 1937. He held that position until May, 1941, when he went to the AT&T Company as assistant vice president, handling personnel matters.

In January, 1944, he went to Indiana Bell as vice president and general manager. Three months later, Mr. Hughes was called to Washington to head the Industrial Personnel Division of the Army Service Forces Headquarters. He represented Under-Secretary of War Patterson on the War Manpower Commission and was a member of the joint Army-Navy Personnel Board, the Council for Personnel Administration, the Army-Navy-Maritime Commission Shipbuilding Wage Stabilization Board, the Secretary of War's Personnel Committee, and the Review Committee of the War Department.

On leaving Government service in September, 1944, he received the Emblem for Exceptional Civilian Service, the highest honor the War Department can bestow upon a civilian employee.

Mr. Hughes was vice president and general manager of Indiana Bell until April 1, 1946, when he was named executive vice president.

Miss Radar of the Great Lakes, in real life Mrs. Clarence E. Anderson of Buffalo, with a bottle containing water from all of the Lakes, recently christened the radar antenna aboard the S.S. John T. Hutchinson. This commercial radar equipment, designed by the Bell Telephone Laboratories, is expected to save millions of dollars annually by preventing accidents.

Bell System Radar Used in First Commercial Installation on Great Lakes

SAVINGS of millions of dollars annually in lost-time accidents is in prospect for Great Lakes ship owners and shippers with the announcement that the Western Electric Company has completed installation of the first experimental commercial radar equipment, as designed by the Bell Telephone Laboratories, aboard a Lakes freighter.

The announcement was highlighted by a ceremony aboard the S.S. John T. Hutchinson, newest and one of the largest vessels on the Lakes, in which Mrs. Clarence E. Anderson of Buffalo, as Miss Radar of the Great Lakes, christened the radar antenna with a bottle containing water from all of the Lakes.

Radar, the miracle weapon of World War II, in its peacetime role on the Lakes will give ship pilots a unique pair of eyes which will pierce through fog, smoke and night in all directions up to some 40 miles from the ship and will detect objects such as channel buoys, ships, shore lines, beacons, and even icebergs. To accomplish this the radar sends out pulses of radio energy in the neighborhood of 9,000,000,000 cycles for one-half of a millionth of a second duration which travel at the speed of light or 186,000 miles per second until they strike a distant object and are reflected back to the ship's radar antenna. The reflected energy or electrical echo returns to the radar receiver, adjacent to the transmitter, and thence to an oscilloscope or indicator in the pilot house of the ship. The electrical echo appears on the indicator in the form of a bright spot and by special control devices the exact position of the object with respect to the ship can be readily determined. Pulses are transmitted and received at the rate of 1,000 times per second. The antenna of the Bell System radar will throw an electrical beam 2 degrees wide in the horizontal plane by 15 degrees high in the vertical plane. This particularly wide vertical beam takes care of the roll of the ship while the narrowness of the beam in the horizontal plane assures better definition of the objects. The beam revolves through 360 degrees 14 times every minute.

During the war the Bell System was the nation's largest supplier of radar equipment to the Government, having furnished more than 56,000 radars valued at almost $900,000,000 and involving over 65 different types ranging from fighter plane units weighing no more than a man to massive 35-ton land-based installations. All of these equipments were designed by Bell Labs.

This initial Great Lakes installation aboard the S.S. John T. Hutchinson marks another step forward in safety and in speeding up commercial shipping on the inland Lakes. It is expected that all the 340 large ships plying the Lakes will be radar-equipped.

Douglas F. G. Eliot

DOUGLAS F. G. ELIOT, general purchasing agent in charge of purchasing and traffic for the Western Electric Company, has been elected a vice president.

As general purchasing agent for Western during the war years, Mr. Eliot was responsible for the procurement of all raw materials, supplies and equipment required by the Company in supplying more than two billion dollars' worth of electronic and communications equipment for the Armed Forces. He supervises the purchase of material supplied by Western to the Bell System.

Graduating from Yale University in 1909, Mr. Eliot joined Western Electric two years later at New York. His early experience in the Company covered various assignments in this country and abroad, and in 1926 he became division purchasing agent in New York. In 1929 he was appointed personnel director and in 1937 general commercial manager. Two years later he was named general purchasing agent and in 1942 the supervision of the Company's traffic department was added to his duties.

The Farmer's Telephone

This picture, like all the others on these pages, is a scene from the movie now being distributed by our Motion Picture Department. Grandmother, played by Minnie Dupree, receives a call on her birthday from her son in England.

At harvest time when any delay might ruin a crop a farmer can save valuable time by calling as this man is for a replacement for a broken part.

OUR Company's Motion Picture Department has been showing for the past two months a picture illustrating the Bell System's postwar program for the expansion and improvement of service in rural areas. It is now available for showings throughout our area.

The film, which was produced by the motion picture division of A. T. & T., presents the work being done by the Bell System to expand and modernize rural telephone service, a program which will cost $100,000,000 and provide service for an additional 1,000,000 rural customers.

The picture opens with Grandma receiving a birthday call from her son, "Uncle Frank." Grandma, who was 18 years old before she saw her first telephone, can scarcely believe her ears when Frank nonchalantly informs her that he is in England and at that moment looking out the window at Buckingham Palace.

"Think of it!" she exclaims delightedly to other members of the rural household, "me on a farm talking to my son thousands of miles away in London."

A representative of the telephone company discusses telephone needs and usage with a fruit grower.

John, played by Rusty Lane, a telephone man spending part of his vacation with his mother and sister's family on the old farm, tells about some of the things the Bell System is doing to help more farmers get telephone service.

Farmers without telephone service are interested in learning the Company's attitude and the many advantages of service. Here John is explaining to three prospects for farm service the construction allowances and charges.

In the office of the County Agent of the United States Department of Agriculture a telephone company employee explains plans for improvements to be made on a service line.

In time of emergency, when sickness or accidents occur, a farm telephone can save a long and hazardous trip for help.

Another son, John, a telephone man who is vacationing at the old farm home- stead, explains to her that many such calls are made daily and are an example of the advantages offered by modern tele- phone service. He goes on to answer questions by Grandma and other mem- bers of the family regarding the tele- phone company's plans for improved rural telephone service. As he talks, the scene shifts to other rural locations demonstrating the improved facilities he describes, and depicting instances where the telephone proves invaluable to the rural customer.

Some of the points brought out by John while he is describing the Bell Sys- tem's rural program include:

The experiments being conducted to enable the use of a single wire for carry- ing both electric power and telephone conversations.

The possible use of radiotelephone to reach isolated rural areas.

The steps being taken to reduce the ringing on party lines.

The aid being given farmers in build- ing and maintaining their own telephone lines.

The new methods and materials being introduced to permit the joint use of long span rural power line poles for both telephone and power wires.

The film closes with the young grand- son, obviously impressed by his uncle's account of the marvels of modern teleph- ony, announcing gravely: "You know, Grandma, I think the telephone is here to stay."

In the movie, the part of Grandma is played by Minnie Dupree, well-known stage and screen actress for more than half a century, while the part of John is taken by Rusty Lane, a prominent actor both on Broadway and in the movies.

On the farm as in the city the telephone has a way of bringing young folks together and giving them a chance to chat about school work and parties. It has the same social value for mother who can call and check with her neighbor on a favorite recipe or on plans for the annual church bazaar.

O. L. Clerc, Crew Foreman of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in St. Louis, demonstrates how he is able to receive instructions over his mobile telephone while on the job.

First Mobile Radiotelephone License Granted To Bell System

OPERATORS of motor vehicles in St. Louis are the first to obtain two-way telephone service between their cars and trucks and any telephone connected with Bell System lines.

The first license to operate radiotelephone service for vehicles has been granted to the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company by the Federal Communications Commission. The service will be introduced in St. Louis at once and will be provided initially on an experimental basis but under regular commercial conditions.

Participants in the trial are expected to include such concerns as parcel delivery and express companies, newspaper publishers, power companies, contractors, bus, trucking and moving van concerns as well as oil burner, refrigeration and other servicing organizations which operate vehicles within the area and to whom keeping in touch with their drivers is important.

Three classes of service will be offered: (1) a general two-way telephone service between any vehicle and any regular telephone or other mobile unit; (2) a two-way dispatch service between a customer's office and his own mobile units only; and (3) a one-way signaling service to mobile units to notify the driver that he should comply with pre-arranged instructions.

The rates for a three-minute general service message within the area served by the St. Louis radiotelephone station range from 30 to 40 cents depending on the location of the land telephone. The charge for a one minute two-way dispatch call is 15 cents. The rates for most calls will not vary with the location of the vehicle. If the calling or called land telephone is outside the St. Louis mobile service area, toll rates apply.

The radio equipment on the vehicle may be provided either by the customer or the telephone company. If furnished by the company, the monthly service charge is $15 and an installation charge of $25 applies.

The general mobile radiotelephone service will operate like this.

Calls to and from vehicles will be handled by mobile service operators. The conversations will travel part way by telephone wire and part way by radio. For example, a man at his desk in St. Louis who wants to talk to the occupant of a certain car or truck will lift his telephone receiver and dial or ask for long distance. He will then ask for the mobile service operator, to whom he will give the telephone number of the vehicle. Numbers such as WJ 2-3873, which will not conflict with any existing central office code, will be used.

The operator will send over the channel a signal which selects the particular mobile station desired and causes a bell to ring and a light to go on in the car or truck. When the driver sees or hears his signal he will answer his telephone. His voice will travel by radio to the nearest receiving station and thence by telephone wire back to the caller.

The person in the vehicle will be able to make a call merely by lifting his telephone and pressing a "talk" button to signal the operator.

View of the handy slide-out type telephone set used in connection with mobile radiotelephone equipment. The set fits under the dashboard of the motor vehicle, within easy reach of front seat occupants.

The radiotelephone central office equipment employed in St. Louis includes a transmitting station and five receiving stations. The antenna of the 250-watt transmitter is located on a 50-foot mast atop the Southwestern Bell headquarters building at 1010 Pine Street. The receiving stations are located in various sections of the city so that vehicles with their relatively low-powered radio sets will be within range at all times. The receiver nearest a calling mobile unit will pick up the voice signals and send them on their way by telephone wire. Radio channels within the frequency range of 152-162 megacycles have been assigned for the service.

St. Louis is the first of a large number of cities in which the Bell System plans to inaugurate mobile radiotelephone service this year. Such a large undertaking requires extensive planning and development in which the Bell Telephone Laboratories is very active. In addition, Laboratories' engineers and facilities are playing a large part in putting the early systems into operation.

Authorization to establish experimental radiotelephone stations in other cities has been granted and work is progressing on the installation of required equipment at those points. Application for a license in each locality must await completion of the necessary facilities.

Metropolitan Commercial Entertains College Placement Directors At Luncheon

HAROLD A. FASICK, Metropolitan Division Manager, arranged a luncheon meeting recently with the Placement Directors of eight women's colleges in the Metropolitan Division, to discuss with them opportunities for their graduates in the Telephone Company.

The meeting furnished an excellent opportunity to discuss with the directors the advantages of employment with the Company and the possibilities for future advancement.

Following the meeting the guests visited the Boylston Street Business Office where they were shown the various aspects of business office assignments.

Guests attending the meeting included: Catherine Roff, Radcliffe College; Viola Saltmarsh, Tufts College; Gertrude Street, Boston University; Anne Sughrue, Regis College; Margaret Rogers, Emmanuel College; Alice Thorpe, Wheaton College; Edith G. Stedman, Radcliffe College; Elizabeth Rapp, Wellesley College; Anna M. Hanson, Simmons College; Donna L. True, Regis College; Norman Abbott, Boston University.

At a later date, two representatives from each of these colleges were invited to a meeting for the same purpose. The representatives included students active in campus affairs, student government groups, and members of the college news staffs.

After an introductory talk by Elizabeth M. Scullane on the general aspects of the service representative assignment, the girls visited the Boylston Street Office with Helen M. Sampson and were taken in groups through the office to observe and talk with our business office personnel on the job.

Later, they attended a tea where they met and talked with several of our people.

They expressed a very real interest in our business office activities, and were most appreciative to Mr. Fasick for making this meeting possible.

700 Women Employees Attend Fashion Show

This spring 700 of our women employees in and around Boston attended the lectures and fashion show of the semi-annual Jordan Marsh "Women Who Work" clinic, twice the number who attended the lectures last fall.

Attended by 3000 women, the fashion show entitled "Suddenly It's Spring" which wound up the series of four lectures on "Face and Figure Fascination," "Let Your Clothes Work for You," "Decorating on a Shoestring" and "Fashions in Foods," was held on March 28 at Symphony Hall, Boston, and one girl from each of the organizations represented in the clinic modeled the new spring clothes with the professional models. Anne Lindmark of Metropolitan Disbursements Accounting is shown above in a navy blue wool dress, one of the two outfits she wore in the show.

Tickets for the clinic allotted to our Company were distributed as far as possible to members of all departments within easy distance of the 6:30 P.M. lectures at the Jordan Marsh Fashion Center by Ellen G. Horrigan of General Traffic who is the "Women Who Work" Advisory Council member for our Company.

Hosts and guests who attended a luncheon held recently at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Boston are shown around the table. Seated are Catherine Roff of Radcliffe College, Viola Saltmarsh, Tufts College, Gertrude Street of Boston University, Anne Sughrue of Regis College, Harold A. Fasick, Metropolitan Division Manager; Margaret Rogers of Emmanuel College, Helen Sampson, Test Supervisor, Metropolitan Division; Alice Thorpe of Wheaton College, F. Bradford Faxon, Commercial Personnel Supervisor; Edith G. Stedman of Radcliffe College. Standing at the head of the table are Leonard E. Morrissey, Division Employment Manager; Elizabeth Rapp of Wellesley College, Anna M. Hanson of Simmons College, Elizabeth Scullane, Induction Placement Supervisor; Donna L. True of Regis College, and Norman Abbott of Boston University.

TELEPHONE HOUR . . . The

In the dead of winter Plant men bucked icy winds, below zero weather and shoulder-deep snowdrifts to accomplish the job of converting telephone service to an efficient communications system for Livermore Falls. Left to right: Bill Williamson, Ted C. Davis, Jr., Marvin G. Casey, Service Foreman.

Livermore Falls,

MAINE

NEW ENGLAND's first postwar dial conversion took place on April 23 in the energetic little town of Livermore Falls on the banks of the Androscoggin River in Androscoggin County, Maine, when 514 lines serving 1173 telephones were cut into service. Associated with the conversion, dial repeater equipment was installed, and 51 miles of open wire between Lewiston and Farmington were replaced by cable.

Although the original plans were laid in 1939 and interrupted because of material shortages, the District Engineer started his actual survey of requirements in September of 1945. The outside construction work of setting poles and wiring was started on December 17, 1945, and the job of outside plant work was completed February 28, 1946.

The preparation of a program for changing customers' telephones from magneto type service to dial was begun in September, 1945. The actual work was under way by January 14, 1946, and completed on March 29, 1946, with the unique record of only one unchanged instrument due to the fact that the customer was spending the winter in Florida. A plant crew of 16 men was needed to complete the instrument changing program.

Livermore Falls now has a new central office building of red brick at 33 Union Street which was started in September of 1945 and completed in November. This exchange serves the towns of Jay and East Livermore and includes a total population of something over 7000 people.

In December of 1945, 967 customers were to have their service changed but when the work was completed 1126 customers were provided with service.

The date of the cutover was arranged to coincide with the Directory delivery date so that no cut-over edition was necessary.

Wire Chief Leo J. King was in charge of operations. Marguerite Hartnett, Evelyn Moynihan of Portland and Gertrude Bergeron of Lewiston handled the program of instructing dialing to the residents of the town.

The first call over the new system was made by First Selectman Merle Davenport who called R. H. Sturtevant, Treasurer of the Livermore Falls Trust Company.

Indicative of the enthusiastic reception given this first postwar conversion job was the heading "Conversion Day" on the April 23rd menu of the Riverside Hotel.

This center of a thriving paper industry in Maine became a "first" in postwar production when the exchange was converted from magneto to dial this spring. During 1946 the Company will convert 10 offices as part of the $45,000,000 construction program, which in turn is part of the $200,000,000 to be spent in the next 5 years in order to make the best possible service available to all our customers.

Reginald H. Sturtevant, Treasurer of the Livermore Falls Trust Co., receives the first call.

ager; Leo J. King, Wire Chief; Edgar A. Farnum, Division Commercial Supervisor; William P. Mennealy, Acting Manager, Rumford.

EDMUND G. WILSON, District Traffic Superintendent, East District, Metropolitan Division, is one of a possible 2,000 collectors to have a complete set of U. S. silver commemorative coins. This set begins with a coin for the World's Columbian Exposition in 1892 and extends through the Arkansas Centennial coin in 1939. Of the Daniel Boone commemorative coin in this set, there were only 2,000 coins minted in the Denver and San Francisco mints, thus making it possible for no more than 2,000 collectors to possess a complete set, and Mr. Wilson is very fortunate to be one.

A telephone man for 25 years, he has been a collector for 15 years, having been interested in coins since a boy. His albums include collections of pennies, dimes, nickels, quarters and several odd pieces of folding money. One of the quarters, known as the Isabella quarter, 1893, is the only U.S. coin on which a foreign ruler appears.

The most fascinating side to coin collecting is the host of stories behind the coins. Mr. Wilson, like a true collector, knows the background of nearly all of his coins.

Above are two of the interesting old coins in his collection. On the left is a coin designed by Benjamin Franklin and minted in 1652, the 13 links representing the 13 original states. On the right is a coin minted in Massachusetts in 1787.

Edmund G. Wilson checks in his Standard Catalogue to find the number minted and the monetary value of a new coin he has just added to his collection.

How about a hobby?

Here are just a few of the fascinating pieces in Helen E. McClellan's collection of over 150 salt and pepper shakers. The base of the little telephone in the center of the picture holds mustard while salt and pepper pour from the receiver and the mouthpiece.

Miss McClellan (right) shows the latest addition to her hobby collection to Florence O. Eno, Supervisor in the Braintree Traffic Office. This pair of shakers was brought to Miss McClellan the day before from Digby, Nova Scotia.

As variety is the spice of life, Helen E. McClellan, Braintree Traffic Clerk, believes in serving spices in a variety of ways. Her hobby is collecting salt and pepper shakers; at present she has 150 pairs from all parts of the world and from nearly every state in the Union.

Miss McClellan, who has been with the Company for 28 years, started collecting shakers about five years ago when a friend who had such a collection urged her to see how many she could get together. In no time her enthusiasm for this interesting hobby had grown by leaps and bounds and soon her collection surpassed that of her friend.

Among Miss McClellan's shakers are a pair made of mother of pearl which are over 100 years old, a set of hand-carved shakers which came from the Fiji Islands and a pair made of blown glass in the shape of a tall silk hat for the salt and a cane for the pepper. Other pairs of her shakers came from Paris, Ireland, Canada and Nova Scotia.

Miss McClellan does not just keep her collection for display but uses the various shaped shakers whenever she has guests for dinner. Each has an individual pair of salt and pepper shakers to fit his or her tastes or personality.

Her hobby has grown so large that it is now pushing dishes out of the china closets in her home. Her friends and business associates help to increase her collection by bringing her odd shakers they find, and Miss McClellan herself can never pass a gift shop without going in "to see what they have."

Organization Changes Affect Four A.T.&T. Vice Presidents

Charles P. Cooper

Leroy A. Wilson

Keith S. McHugh

Arthur W. Page

ORGANIZATION changes affecting the responsibilities of four vice presidents of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company were announced May 15. Effective on that date, Vice President Charles P. Cooper was appointed executive vice president and Vice President Leroy A. Wilson became vice president in charge of Finance. The resignation of Vice President Arthur W. Page as of January 1, 1947, and the appointment of Vice President Keith S. McHugh as his successor in charge of the Information Department, effective June 1, also were announced.

Mr. Cooper will assist the President in the general over-all operation of the business and in coordinating the work of the Headquarters Staff. He is in charge in the absence of the President.

Mr. Wilson will continue in charge of Business Research and Bell System Revenue Requirements Studies. Comptroller and Treasurer report to him.

Mr. Page, who will open an office in New York as a consultant when his resignation takes effect, has asked that his successor take active charge of the Information Department on June 1 in order to free him to complete several individual tasks which he has under way. The A.T.&T. has retained him as a consultant beginning January 1, 1947. He remains a Director.

The present functions and organization of Vice President McHugh's department—Administration-M—will be taken over on June 1 by other departments and the Western Electric Company.

Vice President Cooper entered the Bell System in 1908 as a junior engineer with the New York Telephone Company. Within three months he was promoted to district plant engineer and, after completing a special engineering assignment, he became division plant engineer. He was appointed division plant superintendent at Albany in 1916. In April, 1918, he transferred to the Chesapeake and Potomac Company to assist in Washington during World War I, and became general plant superintendent.

He returned to Ohio in 1920 as general manager of the Cleveland Telephone Company. When that company became the Ohio Bell Telephone Company in 1921, Mr. Cooper was retained as general manager. Upon consolidation of the Ohio Bell and Ohio State Telephone Companies later that year, he became vice president and general manager. He was elected president of Ohio Bell in 1923 at the age of 39, and in 1926 became vice president of A.T.&T.

Vice President Wilson started his Bell System career as a traffic student with the Indiana Bell Company, in 1922, after graduation from Rose Polytechnic Institute in Terre Haute.

He held the positions of district traffic chief and district traffic superintendent and in 1929 was transferred to New York as an engineer with A.T.&T. There he served as directory engineer, rate engineer and commercial engineer, becoming an assistant vice president September 11, 1944.

Mr. Page joined the Bell System as a vice president of the A.T.&T. Company on January 1, 1927, following a full career in the publishing business. He entered that field in 1905, after his graduation from Harvard University, with the firm of Doubleday, Page and Company. In 1913 he became vice president of the company and editor of World's Work. He remained in that position until joining A.T.&T. in 1927, with the exception of a period during World War I, when he did Army intelligence work in France. He is a Director of the A.T.&T. Company and of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Vice President McHugh received his B.S. degree from the University of Wisconsin in 1917 and the same year entered the Army. He served overseas as an ordnance officer and received his discharge as a captain March 1, 1919. Less than three weeks later he started work in New York with the A.T.&T. Company as a clerk.

In July, 1919, Mr. McHugh became an engineer and in 1921 transferred to the Chesapeake and Potomac Company as general commercial engineer in Washington. He went to the New York Company in 1925 as general commercial manager at Albany, and in 1929 was elected a vice president of that company. He returned to A.T.&T. that same year as commercial engineer.

Mr. McHugh was promoted to assistant vice president in 1934, and in 1938 was elected vice president.

The Snake Pit

by Mary Jane Ward

ONE of the most talked about novels in many months is this story of life at Juniper Hill which caused one national commentator to visit a mental institution in New York and devote one of his evening programs to a comparison between it and Juniper Hill, and which precipitated a survey of mental institutions in Life Magazine which is now generating heat in certain state capitals.

In the days when medicine was in rompers and psychiatry unknown, people treated mental cases as best they could. They knew that a person who fell into a snake pit usually was shocked out of his senses. They figured it would work the other way. So one of the first "treatments" society developed for its insane was to hurl them into snake pits. Often it worked. The shock restored mental balance, and, if the patient survived the poison of the snake bites, he might live a normal life. From this bit of history Miss Ward got the name for her book.

The story of Juniper Hill is the story of Virginia Cunningham, who finds herself sitting on a bench on a warm sunny morning wearing a "hoover apron." Virginia's mind laboriously stumbles from one detached thought to another. She doesn't know where she is; she can't remember her address.

She was a writer and so decides she is in a women's jail or reformatory looking for material for a new novel. Successively she thinks she is taking part in some charitable work, attending a Communist meeting. After torturous days of searching for herself she slowly realizes she is in an insane asylum—not to gather material for a book, but as a patient.

This is Virginia's story told as it happened to and was painfully absorbed by a sick mind. All the reader knows is what Virginia sees and thinks, the stumbling workings of her brain.

There's no physical cruelty in the book, but the general unhappy attitude of the inmates creeps out and coldly wraps around the reader. In clear moments, which as they improve, grow more frequent, these inmates realize they are in an insane asylum. Doctors and nurses emphasize it is a hospital for mental breakdowns. But the patients can remember when they were outside and how they felt about the "crazy ones." Virginia thought, "I could face the prospect of blindness, of cancer, but this, no. Never this."

There's something almost as bad as physical cruelty and probably inevitable in a place like Juniper Hill. There's such a complete lack of human dignity, a subjection to personal embarrassment and mortification that the reader cringes from it with Virginia.

The time sequence isn't clear. Neither are all the things that happen to Virginia. There's a confused muddle of shock treatments—of mornings without breakfast, smelly salve on her temples, hands and feet tied down, a gag, a small red light on the wall, and then blackness. There's the strangling tightness of the straight-jacket, the tub treatment—cold water and cold wet sheets, the always thwarted struggle to escape.

There are long hard months before Virginia's husband comes to take her home. But somehow, the reader doesn't feel that she's quite ready to be sent home. In fact, he's not sure that he should be out himself.

Every day is SUN-DAY in the Summer

HOLIDAY FOR HOSIERY

LADIES who have been lining up for nylons are now crowding their favorite cosmetic counters to buy summer stockings—by the bottle, tube or jar instead of by size, denier and length.

Whether you're brushing up on the use of a leg make-up this summer or just learning the art, here are a few pointers that may help.

1. Before you begin, spread a newspaper to stand on to avoid having to clean up a splashed bathroom.

2. Make sure your legs are free from hair. (Much irritation presumably caused by leg make-up has been traced to the hair removing method used before the color was applied. Shaving is considered the method least likely to cause irritation.)

3. Shake the bottle well and pour a small amount into your cupped hand. Press your two hands together.

4. Starting at the foot, use both hands to stroke the cosmetic up the leg from the instep. A rotary motion generally causes less streaking than a straight up-the-leg stroke. Carry the make-up well above the knee. Don't skip the little hollows behind the ankle bones.

5. Work fast in covering the leg. When the make-up seems "tacky" or seems to stick to the fingers, stop. Trying to patch the job after the lotion is dry is guaranteed to be 100% unsatisfactory.

6. If you must dress before your make-up is dry, pin your clothes above the make-up line. When your legs are completely dry, try rubbing them with a tissue handkerchief to remove any excess that might otherwise rub off.

Instead of washing out stockings each night, you substitute a soapy leg bath, followed, if you like, by the use of a hand lotion to smooth your legs for tomorrow's make-up job.

Unless it is specified on the bottle, your make-up contains no sun-screening agent and your legs will tan or burn just as if they weren't made up.

The good old summertime is upon us and everyone is thinking about all the things to do when the thermometer hits 90° and every day is "sun-day." Lest you find yourself at home on one of those precious week-ends because you "haven't a thing to wear," here are three suggestions in the line of summer playtime indispensables which you can whip up yourself with a few quick stitches. On the left is an almost-all-purpose midriff outfit that's so becoming to most figures. The midriff shirt has nice broad shoulders and cap sleeves, and made in a dark color the long-shorts help to make you appear much slimmer. It's SIMPLICITY PATTERN No. 1613 and comes in sizes 10-16.

Your all-important bathing suit should be a two-piece one this summer with a cholo jacket to slip on when the weather turns cool. The one pictured here in the center, made with SIMPLICITY PATTERN No. 1612 in sizes 10-16, has a well-fitting bra, shirred-in-front-and-laced-up-the-sides-panties and a neatly tailored, finger-tip beach coat that hangs straight and full from the yoke. On the right is a one-piece playsuit with a set-in waistband; it has buttons to the neck and is finished off with a winsome little turned-down collar. The pants are well-cut, leaving you room to race around. It's also a SIMPLICITY PATTERN, No. 1618, and comes in sizes 12-20.

BANQUET CLOTH FIT FOR THE Bridal Table

A HAND-CROCHETED tablecloth is a priceless possession and yet this lovely asset is obtainable by every home in which there is a member who can wield a crochet hook. Pictured on the right is a very attractive pattern of feathery pinwheels joined together by a filigree of picots, making a beautiful background for wedding cake and flowers. Crocheted of mercerized crochet cotton that is durable and washable it will last a lifetime. A direction leaflet for crocheting this tablecloth is yours for the asking. Just send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to PRISCILLA, c/o Telephone Topics, 50 Oliver Street, Boston 7, with your request and a copy will be mailed to you.

Forethoughts for the 4th

This is the first peace-time 4th of July in many a long year, so let's make it a gala one with lots of good company. To add a festive note to the table on the Fourth and to pep up drooping summer spirits all season long, these snappy place mats will do the trick. Crocheted in red, white and blue they'll make your table look like a holiday. For simple crocheting directions send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to PRISCILLA.

Marjorie Mills' Recipe of the Month

For a tempting treat in the food line over the Fourth, Marjorie Mills suggests a Strawberry Whip Roll.

1/2 cup enriched flour	3 eggs, beaten and one egg white
3/4 teaspoon baking powder	1 1/4 teaspoons vanilla
1/4 teaspoon salt	Confectioners sugar
3 tablespoons melted margarine	1 cup sliced fresh strawberries
3/4 cup sugar	Whole berries

Sift, measure flour and resift with baking powder, salt. Add 1/2 cup sugar to eggs gradually and beat until thick and light-colored. Add vanilla, fold in flour mixture and add melted margarine. Pour into well-greased pan, 7" x 11" x 1 1/4", lined with wax paper and brushed with melted margarine. Bake in hot oven (400 F.) for 10 minutes. Turn out on damp cheese cloth, roll cake up and cool. Beat one egg white until stiff but not dry. Gradually beat in 1/4 cup sugar. Unroll cake and spread with meringue. Top meringue with sliced strawberries. Reroll and sprinkle top with confectioners sugar. Garnish with mounds of meringue topped with whole strawberries. Yields six servings.

4th of July Chiffon Pie

1 envelope plain unflavored gelatine	4 eggs	1/2 cup milk
1/4 cup cold water	1/2 cup sugar or 3/4 cup light corn syrup	1/4 teaspoon salt
		1 teaspoon vanilla

7 Hints For the Housewife

1. If your pets always curl up in the softest, most popular chairs in the house, try this de-furring trick. To rid upholstery and rugs of dog and cat hair, wet a rubber sponge, squeeze out excess water, and rub over the surface. The hair will roll up in little balls, easy to remove.

2. Forever washing ash trays? Wax them to save daily washing. The ashes won't cling, odor won't linger, and dispensable tissue will wipe them clean.

3. Try slipping an oiled-silk dish cover over the bottom of the pot of a hanging plant. It will catch all the drips when the plant is watered.

4. Does your dog suffer from car-sickness? He will stand this summer's trip well if you give him three to five grains of sodium bromide about 30 minutes before you start.

5. And have you tried making a cedar shavings bed for your dog? Sewed into an old pillowcase or sack, they're flea-repellent. What's more, they make your dog smell more of cedar than of dog!

6. When you cut shelf paper to line drawers, cut for several drawers of the same size at once. By putting several thicknesses in each drawer, when one is soiled, it may be removed to reveal a clean one already in its place.

7. For the youngster who is a reluctant eater, try painting an old tray and putting on decals of storybook characters and bright "good mornings" and "good evenings" to add enjoyment to his meal-times and to catch numerous spills as well.

Beat egg yolks with 1/4 cup of sugar or 1/2 cup of corn syrup. Add salt and milk. Cook in double boiler until custard consistency, stirring constantly. Soften gelatine in cold water and dissolve in hot custard. Add vanilla. Cool. When mixture begins to thicken, fold in stiffly beaten egg whites to which remaining 1/4 cup sugar or corn syrup has been added. Pour into baked pie shell or crumb crust and chill until firm. A chocolate cookie crumb crust is delicious with this pie.

Top of pie may be garnished with stars cut from slices of canned cranberry jelly or other fruit jelly. Crust may also be lined with crushed jelly if desired.

Pie pan may be lined with cookies or slices of slightly stale cake in place of pie crust if desired.

Honey Crumb Pie Shell

3 cups oven-popped rice cereal	1/4 cup melted butter or margarine
2 tablespoons honey

Crush rice cereal into fine crumbs. Add honey and butter; mix well. Press evenly and firmly around sides and bottom of pie pan. Bake in slow oven (325°F.) about 10 minutes. Cool before adding filling. Yields one 8-inch pie shell.

Commendation

The Owl Club of Harvard University recently held a dinner in celebration of the Club's fiftieth anniversary. The feature of the dinner was a call from Honolulu where several of the Club's prominent members are located. Two loud speakers were installed to insure the 250 members gathered in Cambridge to hear not only their absent members talking to them and wishing them "Aloha," but also Hawaiian music transmitted directly from the islands.

Ralph Longfellow of Metropolitan Commercial handled the details of the call and during the call he was assisted by Herbert Ellison, also of Commercial and Charles Donahue of Plant.

Ralph recently received the following letter from Robert Jenney commending him on the excellent reception of the call.

"Dear Mr. Longfellow,

"I have been asked by the members of the Owl Club of Harvard University to express their appreciation to both you and the Telephone Company for the excellent job you did in arranging for the amplification of the telephone call from Honolulu on Saturday evening, May 4th. The reception of the call was excellent and exceeded our fondest expectations.

"The call enabled us to reunite members of the Club who were unable to attend the Fiftieth Reunion Dinner because of the great distance involved. The Hawaiian music came through very clearly, and the voices were distinct and recognizable.

"This unique feature 'phone call was the highlight of the evening, and the Telephone Company has received many compliments on being able to provide this service. You took a personal interest in making arrangements for this call, which we are sure did much to ensure its success."

Touché

A notoriously loquacious matron once invited Mark Twain to be her guest at the Metropolitan Opera House to hear "Aida," a favorite of his. But the hostess talked so much during the performance that Mark was unable to follow the music. When he told her good night, she gushed, "Do join us again Saturday night. The opera is 'Tosca,' and you will surely enjoy it."

"I know I shall," Mark Twain rejoined. "I've never heard you in that."

Not So Easy

They tell that a sailor off the boat after a long cruise rushed to a phone first thing and called his girl. In a little while he hung up and he looked bewildered.

"Wassa matter?" asked a pal.

"She's gonna get married," groaned the guy.

"Aw," said the pal, "forget it. There's lotsa girls."

"Yeah," said the guy, "but she's gonna marry me."

How Many?

A crowded double-deck bus stopped at a corner and a stout middle-aged man descended the stairs, carrying a small girl. Depositing her carefully on the curb, he climbed back up and brought down a little boy. Again he made the journey to the top of the bus, and this time he carried down a younger child.

"For goodness sake," snapped a woman waiting to get on the bus, "what's he got up there? A nest?"

Right Either Way

"So you call your canary 'Joe.' Does that stand for Joseph or Josephine?"

"We don't know. That's why we call it 'Joe.'"

A fellow was taking his girl home after a show and he said, "I have a riddle for you. 'What's the difference between a taxicab and the subway?'" "I don't know," she replied.

"Well, if you don't know," he said, "we'll go home in the subway."

An Irishman was walking down a London street after an air raid, with a door-knob in his hand. He was cursing himself, and a friend he encountered inquired, "What's the matter, Pat?"
